Melbourne based chef and hospitality lecturer Daman Shrivastav has been actively supporting the needy in the best way he can. For over 10 years and counting, he has been cooking meals weekly from his home and handing it out to those in need. Daman, alongside his 8-year-old daughter Diya, started a cooking show called DDs Kitchen during the lockdown. Through this channel, Daman and Diya work passionately to inspire kids and families to cook and simultaneously teaching his daughter about helping those in need. The food from the cooking show is distributed by this daddy-daughter duo to help international students and those in need. Today DDs Kitchen is a non-profit, charity organisation registered with ASIC and ACNC, supporting the community by providing free food to disadvantaged families.
